

Homefront Protective Group, Law Enforcement Training presents:

Transparency in Policing

The Key to Building and Keeping the Community's Trust

Traditionally, police departments are often secretive and misunderstood by the public and by the media. Combining those factors with the current anti-police sentiment displayed across the country has led to a volatile “powder keg” of protests, riots, and disturbances. Law enforcement organizations are at risk of losing the public trust when they are slow to, or do not, respond to severe or continuous incidents with timely and accurate information. Transparency is the only way to combat rumors, false narratives, and anti-police propaganda. Transparency is also the most effective way to build or rebuild trust with the community. This course will provide strategies and tactics to develop an effective transparency program for your department.

Course Topics:

- Understanding why the Police are Secretive?
- What is Transparency in Policing?
- Responding to Community Policy Questions
- Properly Explaining the Use of Force to Civilians
- Discussing the Complaint Process with the Community
- Enacting a Civilian Advisory Committee
- Developing a Departmental Information Sharing Program
- Using Imagination while implementing Transparency
- Branding and Marketing your Department
